ITALIAN FLIER SAFE AT THE AZORES

HOPPED OFF AT TREPASSY, N. F. FORCED DOWN BY DENSE FOG

Francesco De Pinedo, the Aviator Who has Flown Over Four Continents In An Airplane Meets His Waterloo Flying Over the Atlantic Ocean Near Portuguese Territory—His Airship, the Santa Marie, Found With Navigator Safely Floating On the Bosom of the Ocean and Was Towed Into Fayal.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo has been towed into Fayal, Azores, according to a radio message picked up at Lisbon, Portugal, late Tuesday.

An earlier radio message received directly from Commander de Pinedo, stated that he was being towed to the Azores and that he needed no further assistance.

The commander suffered no injury in the descent of his plane to the sea.

Wireless advices from Lisbon to la Nacion said that Commander Francesco de Pinedo landed 150 miles from the Azores, because of fog and that his machine was being towed to Horta.

One of the wings of the ship was damaged and there was other minor damage, it was said.

The first definite word that Francesco de Pinedo, four-continent aviator, apparently was safe was reported Tuesday afternoon by the Radio Corporation of America to The Associated Press in a radiogram picked up by the Radio Corporation's coastal station at Chatham, Massachusetts, reporting "all well" with his plane Santa Maria II.

The Radio corporation said the message, originating with the steamer Cabo Torres, was relayed thru the liner Leviathan and read:

"Sailing Vessel Infante Vessagres, bound southeast towing Italian hydro airplane Santa Maria Savoia 10016. All Well."

The Cabo Torres was at latitude 41.25 north and longitude 32.28 west when the sailing vessel towing the Italian's plane was sighted at 12:50 GMT, or 8:05 Eastern Daylight time.

The location of the sailing vessel was 200 miles northwest of the main body of the Azores, but only 100 miles or so northwest of Flores, the most westerly island of the group. Flores, a mountainous spot, has two towns on it, Santa Cruz and Lagenes.

Late Tuesday night the news that the Spanish steamer Cadatorres had seen the Santa Maria II, Commander Francesco de Pinedo's plane, in tow by the sailing ship Infante Vessagres near the Azores, was confirmed.

Later again radio messages from Corvos Island, the Azores, and other messages from Lisbon, Portugal, reported that the Santa Maria was being ing towed to Fayal Island.

The Ministry of Aviation then received and announced the report that De Pinedo and his comrades were safe and well.

Immense crowds went delirious with joy, shouting and cheering as the bulletins were announced.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo's four-continent flight was started from Cagliari, Sardinia, February 13. On February 22, he flew from the Cape Verde Islands to Fernando do Noronha, off the coast of Brazil.

The Italian continued his flight thru South America and arrived in New Orleans on March 29. Flying to the Pacific coast, his plane was burned when riding at anchor at Roosevelt dam, Arizona, April 5. A new plane was sent to him from Italy, and he flew in it from New York to Florida, thence to Chicago, Montreal, Quebec, Shippegan, New Brunswick, Trepassey, Newfoundland—hopping off for the Azores early Tuesday morning.

Dynamiting the Levee Below New Orleans

This photograph, made at the instant of the explosion, shows the actual dynamiting of the Mississippi levee in St. Bernard parish when that and adjoining parishes were sacrificed to the flood waters of the Mississippi river to save the city of New Orleans. Afterward it was necessary to blast other openings in the dike and the operation was successful so far as New Orleans was concerned, but, of course, the farm and trapping lands between there and Lake Borgne were inundated and the loss there was considerable. All the inhabitants had been evacuated.

RELIEF AGENT.

H. H. Eyman, who has been relieving J. A. Miller at the local Pennsylvania railroad office, has gone to Milford, Ohio, to relieve the agent at that place.

RULING ON INSURANCE IS ISSUED BY TURNER.

County commissioners have no authority to purchase and pay for burglar or hold-up insurance for the county treasurer or for any other county officer, nor have they authority to pay for insurance against forgery, Attorney General Turner ruled Tuesday.

The opinion was given at request of the state bureau of inspection of public offices.

In answer to another question from Vernon M. Riegel, state director of education, Turner ruled that there is no constitutional or statutory inhibition preventing a member of a county board of education from serving at the same time as a member of the general assembly.

Clerks of courts are without authority to pay trustees of county law library associations any part of the county's portion of fines imposed and collected by the common pleas court for violation of the Crabbe law, he ruled on a third question submitted by E. B. Brown, Hardin county prosecutor.

SHERIFF DAVIS AND DEPUTIES CAPTURE STILL

Raid Was Made in Wayne
Township and One Man and
Two Women are in Jail.

A ten gallon still was found on the farm of John W. Haughn in Wayne township Tuesday and some fifty gallons of mash and between three and four gallons of the finished product were captured.

The still was found in the home of a tenant named Edgar Davidson, and with him were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gilmore, of Williamsport. Sheriff Davis' department brought in Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Edgar Davidson. Mr. Davidson, who is a cripple, was too ill of tuberculosis and could not be taken from his bed.

When Sheriff Davis and his deputies surrounded the house Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock the moon shiners were taken completely by surprise. They hurriedly emptied some of the newly made whisky from vessels which were hidden in a hay mow. The mash was destroyed by the officers. The women made strenuous objections to being brought in by the officers, but they are now in the county jail. They will have a hearing before Judge J. W. Adkins.

Sheriff Davis and his deputies have been trying for some time to run down this bunch, but could not locate the place where they manufactured the whisky.

The worm of the still was hidden out in the yard and was under a wooden pail. The still boiler was a ten gallon cream container and to an ordinary observer, looked like a receptacle that farmers use to send cream to a dairy.

TO BUILD BUNGALOW.

L. R. Young, the contractor and builder, has secured the contract to build a six room frame bungalow for Misses Daisy and Viola Woolaver. The house will be built on Gilford road, near the residence of J. J. Brehmer.

PHONE RATES DISCUSSION TUESDAY EVE

Protest to be Filed With Utilities Commission—Doctor Clarke on Dentistry.

The meeting of the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening was devoted to two local subjects, the dentists and the Citizens Telephone company. Dr. H. R. Clarke, the dean of dentists, was the speaker for his science and conferees in the dental profession.

Dr. H. S. Chenoweth with the city's first dentist back in 1859, the city directory mentions Dr. E. C. Clarke and Dr. William R. Lilly, the fathers of the speaker and Dr. E. J. Lilly and Dr. R. F. Lilly.

Altho Dr. Clarke spoke of the fact that Dr. Chenoweth was the first dentist, Dr. M. B. Strong and Dr. S. Barbour ran advertising cards in the issues of this paper back in 1831 and 1832.

Dentistry, said the speaker, is practically a recent science and is not much over a hundred years old. It has made great strides in the past fifty years. Circleville now has seven dentists.

J. R. Noecker, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the increased rates, which the Citizens Telephone company will ask the Utilities commission of Ohio to grant them, made his report, which was statistical showing the organization of the company back in 1901, when the company was organized with a capital of $200,000.

Following Mr. Noecker's report, Attorney Charles Gerhardt quoted the law on procedure, as to how the telephone company could get across and charge the increased rates, provided no protest was registered before June 1. Mr. Gerhardt advised the chamber of commerce to get busy. If you don't, they will get what they are asking for. The Logan Gas company pulled a trick on the city council and this was followed by both the Ohio Utilities company and the Pickaway Water company, now known as the Public Utilities corporation.

The chamber of commerce passed a resolution instructing the secretary to file a formal protest and complaint with the Utilities commission of Ohio on behalf of that body and the subscribers or patrons generally of the telephone company against the reasonableness of said proposed change and raise of rates.

THE STAGE

Ideal Career For Girl, Says Mrs. Belmont.

There has never been a moment when the stage offered a girl such a career as it does today," says Mrs. August Belmont, the former celebrated actress, Eleanor Robson, who is now a leader in New York society. Quoted by Gene Markey in an article in this week's Liberty, Mrs. Belmont explains:

"Once a girl wins success, the world is hers. The theater is the greatest playground in the world and its favorite daughters achieve a fame that cannot be measured in electric lights and newspaper prominence. The stage has advanced tremendously in the last dozen years.

Plays are more interesting than ever before," Mrs. Belmont continues. "Today's best plays offer an infinitely broader field for the actress, and golden opportunities for interesting characterizations. And as the theater improves, the stage as a career grows more honorable. There is no career to match it for a woman.

"Moreover, a successful actress enjoys the rare privilege of meeting the most interesting personalities of her day—in the worlds of art, literature, music and politics.

"If I had a daughter—and she had talent—I would rather she chose the stage than any other career."

Ninety dollars was all the money Andrew Jackson claimed he had, when he retired from the Presidency and went back to the life of a planter, points out Clifford Raymond in an article in Liberty.

EXPERIMENT STATION FOR CIRCLEVILLE

The Ohio Experiment Station "on wheels" will arrive, via the Pennsylvania Railway, Friday, 3, in readiness for Livestock Day, Saturday June 4, at Circleville.

Reservations have been made on this "Livestock Special" for 110 head of cattle, 140 head of hogs and 84 head of lambs which have been on "feeding trials" at the station this winter. The exhibit will be arranged so that each lot may be placarded showing initial weight of stock kinds and amount of feeding, rate of cost of grains. Livestock specialists, Ohio State Experiment Station and Ohio University will explain the methods and results of these feeding demonstrations.

A comparison of cost price and sales price on feeder cattle, hogs, and lambs should emphasize the importance of the lessons to be gained through these demonstrations. Farm Bureau officials, livestock feeders and breeders, experiment station and Ohio Livestock Specialists, County Agents, Service Managers, Rotarians, and Chamber of Commerce and Newspapers are all co-operating to make this program a success.

Will you be one of the four thousand in attendance, Livestock Day, June 4, in Circleville.

ELECTRICITY

Dominant Factor In Present-day Life.

Addressing the Industrial Committee of the Spokane, Washington, Chamber of Commerce, Lewis A. Lewis said:

Suppose for a moment that all electric service in any city should suddenly cease forever; that telegraph and cable lines would cease to hum with public and private messages, that telephones everywhere went out of commission, that radio, so recently found, was lost again, that the trolley lines stopped, ignition on the autos failed to function, that electrically-driven industry stood still, police signals and fire alarms failed to work and fire pumps failed to pump water to the heights, and when night came, darkness could not longer be dissipated by pressing a button or snapping a switch, the streets remained in gloom and citizens everywhere had to carry candles.

"A moment's reflection will show that such a catastrophe would strike the city a blow almost as overwhelming as that which struck Pompeii. Older means of lighting and locomotion could be resumed, but the most distinguishing features of modern life and present day civilization would become like the tombs of the ancient Egyptians. Business would be literally paralyzed.

LIFE IS THE GREATEST ASSET

Reduced to an economic formula human life remains a much more important asset to a community than all its material possessions, it is asserted by the Insurance Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. To support its statement it cites the estimate of one of the country's outstanding statisticians that the value of the lives of the country's citizens, based on their future earning power, is more than $1,500,000,000,000. This would be five times as great as the nation's material wealth, valued today at $350,000,000,000.

"The United States," says the Insurance department in a bulletin announcing a program upon which it has embarked with the co-operation of the Committee on Administrative practice of the American Public Health Association to enlist chambers of commerce throughout the country in health conservation, "sustains a tremendous economic loss each year due to sickness and death. The average citizen is said to lose about seven days each year due to sickness which would correspond to a loss of 2 per cent in useful industrial or commercial productivity. As our national income is more than $60,000,000,000 a year, it is apparent that this loss alone totals considerably more than a billion dollars annually. Added to this is the cost of medical and hospital service which has been estimated to be at least $10 per capita, or more than $1,000,000,000 each year. Sickness in the United States therefore involves a direct cost of more than $2,000,000,000 annually.

Four Presidents Held Unwelcome as Students

Princeton, N. J.—Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and Grover Cleveland would never have received degrees from modern American universities, in the opinion of Prof. Walter L. Whittlesey of the politics faculty of Princeton university.

"It is not very likely that Lincoln would have come to college today," Professor Whittlesey said, "for the cost would have been prohibitive. Moreover, a mind like his would have outrun all bounds and been unwelcome in the average university."

The mind of Cleveland, who arrived at conclusions deliberately and well, was too slow to answer the gibbness demanded by educators today, according to Professor Whittlesey.

Jefferson and Franklin would have been "fired" early in their college careers, Professor Whittlesey believes, because they probably would not have submitted to the restraint placed upon present-day students.

Safer

"How many people have you shaken hands with in the course of your political career?"
"Thousands," said Senator Sargent. "And I welcomed everyone. It is much safer to shake hands with a crowd than it is to make a political speech."

INVESTIGATE GRAY BIGAMY CHARGES

New York, May 23.—Acting on advice from Baltimore police that Henry Judd Gray, corset salesman now in the death house at Sing Sing awaiting execution for his part in the murder of Albert Snyder, magazine art editor, may have contracted a bigamous marriage with a Baltimore girl five years ago, District Attorney Newcombe of Queens county today sent the state's attorney at Baltimore a rogues' gallery photograph and a complete description of Gray.

Baltimore officials wrote Newcombe that a Miss Caroline Probst there had made a complaint against a salesman named Henry Gray, who she said had married her five years ago. She believes the man may be Henry Judd Gray.

When the Old Engine Lacks Pep
When you feel the lack of full compression in the motor of your car — you need to change to a heavier grade of Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil. As cars add mileage, engines wear. Wear in the cylinders must be corrected with heavier oil to seal the increased clearance, unless the clearances are so great that you should have the rings refitted or new pistons. Let us help you determine the proper oil.

WHEN YOU AIN'T NO MORE

A FELLOW buys rubbers
To put on his feet
A hat he obtains for his dome;
And in that direction
Of needy protection
He bulwarks the place he calls home.
Our fighters in khaki
Wore helmets of steel,
Our banks have alarms by the ton;
For merely the reason
That safety's in season
A copper must carry a gun.
But think of your family's failure,

Get wise, use a little restraint:

AMUSEMENTS

What should a girl do when, after traveling several thousand miles to visit her grandfather, she finds that he has always considered her to be a boy and that the visit of a granddaughter at that particular time would be little short of a disaster?

That is the problem that confronts Bebe Daniels in her latest Paramount comedy-drama, "Senarita," which comes to the Met theater today.

Miss Daniels solves the problem in characteristic fashion. She becomes a boy for the time being and hiding behind flourishing black mustachios and the costume of a dashing caballero she appears to the grandfather she has never seen, not as the Senorita Francesca Hernandez, but as Senor Francisco.

This is the situation upon which John McDermott has fashioned the story for what is stated by critics to be the most fascinating role that Bebe Daniels has ever played.

Supporting Miss Daniels in "Senarita" are James Hall, Paramount's new leading man who in this production makes his third appearance opposite the star; William Powell, Joan Standing, Josef Swichard, Gayne Whitman and Raoul Paoli, celebrated Italian leading man and all around European athlete, holding the continental championship for the shot put.

Clarence Badger, director of "A Kiss in a Taxi" and "The Campus Flirt" handled the megaphone on this distinctly different Bebe Daniels production.

CAPITAL CITY
MADE TO ORDER*Step Taken by Australian
Government Parallels
That of U. S.

Washington.—"By moving into a capital city made out of hand, where no town existed before, the Australian government has taken a step closely parallel to that taken by the United States in the summer of 1800, when the seat of government was moved from one of its greatest cities, Philadelphia, into a virtual wilderness," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. "Canberra, the federal city, was formally dedicated by the duke of York on May 9, and the Australian parliament began deliberations in the new capital on the same date.

"A century and a quarter has seen a great advance in the art of capital-city building," continues the bulletin; "and although the residents of Canberra will find their capital, as early Washingtonians found theirs, a city made up in large part of 'magnificent distances,' at least they will have the organized comforts of modern community life such as the infant Washington could not know. One of the first things done at Canberra was to start work on a water supply system. The first unit of this has long been completed. Next, both sanitary and storm sewers were constructed; and only a little later a powerhouse was built, and a railway was extended to an existing line. There are some good streets in Canberra in place of the rude trails and muddy paths by which the American congressmen of 125 years ago found their way through thickets and across morasses between the capitol and the White House.

"The federal territory in which the new Australian capital is situated, was set apart for the purpose in December, 1900. It is near the southeastern corner of the continent close to its center of population. The territory contains 912 square miles and so is 13 times the size of the present District of Columbia.

Plans Chosen by Contest.

"Australia's new capital is to be an inland and upland city. It lies some 70 miles from the ocean, behind the dividing range of mountains that skirts the coast. It is nearly 200 miles southwest of Sydney and about 300 miles northeast of Melbourne. The site chosen for the city was formerly a sheep 'station' or ranch, an undulating upland plain with an altitude of about 1,800 feet. Scattered about are isolated hills rising 800 feet or more, while across the plain flows a small river, the Molonglo. It is in a latitude corresponding roughly to that of Chattanooga, Tenn., or Asheville, N. C.

"A world-wide contest was launched by Australia in 1911 for the submission of plans for her made-to-order capital. The first prize was won by an American, the second by a Finn, and the third by a Frenchman. The plan which has been taking shape in the Australian hills in recent years follows the American design in general, but has been modified to include some of the good points of the other winning plans, as well as changes considered necessary by the commissioners and engineers who have been entrusted with the building of the city. "A commanding eminence south of the river was chosen as the site for the permanent capital, and about this blocks are arranged in a great circle. Lesser circles of blocks impinge upon this Capitol circuit, or exist at a distance, connected by radial avenues. North of the river, on a similar hill, a university will be built.

"Australians have profited by the errors of other capital builders, and have provided against the topsylike propensity of cities to 'just grow,' as did Washington during a certain era of its existence. No lots or areas in the district will be sold outright. Instead 99-year leases will be given, with reappraisal of values every 10 years. The leases will pay rent amounting to 5 per cent on the appraised values. By withholding leases in certain sections of the city and granting them in others, the commission of three men in charge of Canberra can control its growth. The commission also requires that no structure be erected until the plans for it have received official approval.

Dream: City to Grow Slowly.

"About $25,000,000 has been expended so far toward the development of Canberra, but it still lacks much of having the appearance of a city or even of a town such as Americans or Europeans are used to. This is because the commission resolutely set about districting the future city. It now has the appearance, therefore, of a group of villages scattered over a plain. Australia is willing to bring its dream city into existence slowly. As an example, the parliament buildings are considered to be 'temporary' structures; yet they will probably be used for several generations before being superseded by a permanent capitol on the site reserved for it.

"A definite system of physical development is being adhered to. The center of the city will be given over to public buildings, parks and lakes. Off to itself is the nucleus of the shopping district; elsewhere is a modified industrial area for laundries, cold storage and the like. At a distance the district for inexpensive homes already has its scores of small bungalows. The section for more pretentious residences lies off in another direction. So the city is being shaped."

The Wisdom of Fools
By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS
(Copyright.)
DELICIA MOSELEY sang mockingly a fragment of pot-house ballad, caught from her cockney nurse:
Go dress yourself, Dinah, in gorgeous array,
And take yourself a husband both gallant and gray.
"Why the carol, darling? Hath music of this sort charms to soothe the parental breast?" Norman Blake demanded lily.
Colonel Moseley craved a son-in-law—not on general principles, but as a passport to certain paradise. That is, to the winning of Madame Delano: "The one woman I ever loved—really loved, sir, more beautiful than ever—and worth a million into the bargain," he had explained to Judge Blake, Norman's father, and the legal salvation of the Moseley menage.
Madame Delano also remembered—she admitted the fact not a bit coyly. Moreover she was lonely. The million had been hardly earned by twenty-five years of roving and comfortless if costly existence as Lemuel Alden Delano's wife. He had seemed at the altar the very moral and pattern of an aristocratic corpse. But he lived on for many years. In the second year of her martyrdom, Archibald Moseley had turned fickle—marrying out of hand Delicia Vere, whom, amongst all women, Madame Delano most hated. Then Delicia had died, leaving a daughter of her name. There indeed lay the root of Madame Delano's decree. "If you want me, you must get rid of that girl!" she said to Moseley.
He, however, had had the grace to rate her soundly for such unwomanly feeling. Something came of it—six months' truce. Surely that was long enough for Delicia to pick and choose from her swarming beaux a man quite to her mind. When Delicia had countered: "How if I happen not to be to his mind?" Madame had sent word that the prospect of one day inheriting the Delano millions would mend surely and swiftly any such small flaw.
This the latest bulletin from the enemy camp inspired further balladry—Delicia broke into mournful falsetto with:
O! Pappy, O! Pappy, I've made up my mind
Unto marriage just yet I don't feel inclined,
Her very large fortune I'll gladly give
If you'll let me live single a year or two more?

"Take that back—if you know what's good for—us," Norman thundered, trying hard to frown.
"Dear me! Where, I ask, do you come in?" Delicia retorted.
"You're forgetting the painful dearth of men with my looks and talent," Norman flung back loftily. Then the unregenerate pair danced up and down the big old parlor. As Delicia dropped her final curtsy, Norman exploded: "All we lack of a perfect match is a mere half million—wonder can't we persuade madame of the fact? Also that, if she listens to reason, we'll put the comeliest on the old boy—a marriage contract, you know—so there'll be two happy families instead of two waiting for a dead woman's shoes."
"But—you wouldn't take me just as I stand," Delicia broke in.
"Is that a dare? Just you try me," from Norman.
"How much money have you in hand?" Delicia demanded. Lightning exploration of pockets resulted in the startling total of eleven dollars and fifty cents. "I see?" said Delicia. "I'm sought for my money—I have twenty dollars cash—and five hundred in the bank."
"Are you game? Really?" Norman asked huskily. Delicia nodded.
They didn't elope, this whimsical pair—simply walked into Judge Blake's office, and got themselves tied tight and fast in record time. The judge choked up a bit over the final words—the foolhardiness of it had taken his breath. What could the future hold for two so sadly spoiled? It took him all back to have Norman ask stolidly: "D'ye want a brisk young partner, judge—sober and diligent, with a wife to support?"
Support her he did, asking no favors. Instead of a tour, the pair looked up a bungalow, bought it on faith and credit—due to the five hundred in the bank—and therein faced a happy future.
Six months Madame Delano sat tight. Delicia had removed herself from the picture—"but really, my dear, the whole thing was too shocking!" Then suddenly, her long, long loneliness, the empty heart and house in wait for her, got in their fine work. She sent for Judge Blake privily—as privily she kept him busy for a fortnight. Then Greenbrier neighborhood had even a bigger sensation—not in the Delano-Moseley wedding, but in the amazing fact that Madame had parted her million evenly to the fraction of a hair, endowing Norman in fee with his moiety, and settling the rich remainder upon a potential Margaret Delano Blake, Delicia's eldest daughter.
So was the wisdom of fools abundantly justified—for all the four most nearly concerned lived long and happily ever after.

The Four Things That Matter.

There are four qualities we look for in a motor oil:

1. It must give perfect lubrication.
2. It must leave the engine in clean condition.
3. It must be free from impurities that damage the engine.

Cache of Confederate Muskets and Ammunition Found While Excavating Bridge in North Carolina.

Raleigh, N. C.—Seven feet below the bottom of Deep river a cache of Confederate muskets and ammunition was brought to light by a force of the highway commission when excavating for a bridge between High Point and Greensboro. The woodwork on the muskets was excellently preserved after lying in the mud and water for half a century, according to Charles Ross, assistant attorney general assigned to the highway commission.

Five and ten-inch shells as well as cannon balls, still packed in the boxes in which they were shipped, were included in the ammunition found. The five-inch shells had wooden plugs which had allowed the water to seep through and wet the powder inside. Some of these were emptied, but the big shells presented another problem. These were plugged with pewter or lead, and the workmen were not at all sure that the moisture had penetrated them, hence the fear of striking a percussion cap had prevented any of the big shells being opened when Mr. Ross left the scene.

"They put some of the shells and cannon balls in my car to haul them up to the top of the hill, and I was right relieved when they took them out," Mr. Ross stated.

Local tradition has it that two carloads of ammunition was shipped from Richmond during the Civil war, but the "damn Yankees" succeeded in burning the railroad bridge at this point before the train hauling the supplies could cross it. The Confederate soldiers loaded all the ammunition possible on wagons, and then threw the remainder in the river to keep the Yankees from using it.

SPEARHEAD CLEW
TO VIKINGS IN U. S.

Flint Different From That Used by Indians.

Orono, Maine.—A large flint spearhead made of material different from Indian spearheads of this state is arousing renewed interest in the stories of Norse adventures in North America in the Eleventh century. The spearhead, which was found on the beach at Pemaquid several years ago, is now in the possession of Walter B. Smith, who has made extensive studies of Indian remains in this region.

In a report on the possibility of finding traces of the Norsemen, just made by Mr. Smith, he states that the spearhead may be Indian in origin. He points out, however, that it is not of flint, such as the Indians used, but seems to be identical with a rock called helleflinta, which is well known in Scandinavia. The fact that Eleventh century Vikings had passed the age of stone tools adds to the mystery.

Where the Vikings landed in this country is not exactly known. The place described as Vinland is believed to have been somewhere along the Labrador coast, and the accounts say that some of the explorers stayed several years.

"If the sagas are true," Mr. Smith says, "it seems improbable that some of the numerous bays of the extensive coast of Maine could have remained unknown to these hardy voyagers. They would have been lured here by the spirit of adventure or the hope of gain, or driven hither by storms."

Mr. Smith has spent some time vainly seeking Indian village sites and burial places around Pemaquid, in the hope of finding objects which the Indians might have obtained from the Norsemen. A number of shell heaps proved that Indians had once lived there, but no trace of European work was found in any of these.

Tools of iron possessed by the Norsemen would probably be masses of rust by this time, he points out. But most objects of copper, bronze, lead and silver would be still recognizable. Shards of Norse pottery might still survive, and also glass, particularly beads.

"If Norsemen actually discovered North America at that early date, I believe there is still a possibility of finding proof of it, unless such proof is already destroyed," Mr. Smith concludes.

Layman Sits as Judge
in Court of Appeals

Trenton, N. J.—Joseph L. Dear of Jersey City shares with George Van Bushkirk of Hackensack the distinction of being the only layman on the bench of the highest court of the state—the only court in which laymen sit. They receive $40 for each day spent in court.

Although the constitution of 1844 empowers governors to appoint laymen to any court of the state, they have always been appointed to the Court of Errors and Appeals. This court renders its decisions by ballot rather than by individual opinion, being one of the few courts in the United States which does so. The procedure is a relic of Colonial days, when the court was made up of the governor and his council of county representatives.

The bench of Errors and Appeals today is composed of 16 judges—the chancellor, chief justice, his associate justices and six special judges.

LEAGUE LEADERS

Defeat Circleville Eagles In Good Game By 3 To 2 Score.

The Circleville Eagle team lost a heart breaker game to the league leading West Jefferson aggregation by a score of 3 to 2, Sunday afternoon at the Mason lot.

A peculiar circumstance was apparently the cause of the defeat. The two teams had battled up to the seventh frame to a one to one tie. In this inning Thomas, the visitors' center fielder hit a hot one right through the box. The ball struck Kanaval on his left leg. The pitcher by a fine effort and snap throw recovered the ball in time to retire Thomas at first, but it developed that as a pitcher Kanaval was through for the day. A clean hit followed in this inning without any scoring, but when Kanaval went to the center of the field in the eighth he was quite sick as a result of the blow and the visitors jumped on him for three hits which with a sacrifice and a long fly put two runs across.

Circleville came back in their half of the eighth, scored one and had the tying run on the bases but dubbed their chance by bad judgment in base running.

Taken all in all though it was a nice game of base ball, and while the fans thought the locals should have copped they got the worst of their money.

Two fine catches were made in the outfield, one by Schell when he raced to center to take Stoker's drive, and then by a nice throw doubling Longshore at first who was headed around the bags, as it looked impossible for Schell to reach the ball.

In the fifth Thomas, the visitors' center fielder robbed Stewart of a hit when he raced in and took his line drive at his shoe tops, rolling over several times after catching the ball. Thomas also started a snappy double when he went in the air after Osborn's liner and caught Kerns off second.

Longshore, the West Jefferson kid finger, grew unsteady in the fourth and retired in favor of the veteran Fred Bruck who twirled one of his usual good games. After Kanaval was forced out of the game Dougherty pitched the final frame for Circleville and fanned two of the three men who faced him.

Carroll will play in Circleville next Sunday.

FARM PHONES

ARE TIME AND
MONEY SAVERS

Out of 200,000 Pennsylvania farms, 124,000, or 62 per cent, have telephones.

The diversified farmer's time is worth something every day in the year; and the telephone is the cheapest, best time saver ever invented, for much of the business of the farm.

The telephone is a hired man who eats nothing, who will not forget his orders, who will not flirt or elope with the hired girl, who will not set fire to the barn with his careless pipe or cigarette, who will not strike for higher wages just when the need is greatest. A farm phone is almost as necessary as land or house or barn.

DIVIDES

Apple Varieties Into Blossom Groups.

Apple varieties differ in the severity of the first drop of flowers, which occurs one to two weeks after the petals fall, F. S. Howlett, assistant in horticulture at the Ohio Experiment Station, finds while making an extensive study of blossoming, pollination, and fruit setting.

Varieties, he says, may be divided roughly into two groups based on differences in fall of blossoms. In the first group are such varieties as Baldwin, Jonathan, Grimes, Rome Beauty, Wealthy, Yellow Transparent, Banana and Oldenburg, which tend to pass through the first drop with a high average number of fruits remaining to a spur.

The second group includes Stayman, Winesap, Arkansas, Arkansas Black, varieties that retain only one or two fruits to a cluster after the first drop. Delicious and Rhode Island Greening thin themselves heavily at the first drop, but not usually so severely as the varieties of the Winesap group.

These differences are attributed by Mr. Howlett to some factor other than pollination, as several varieties have a considerable number of flowers that cannot set fruit no matter how well pollinated. They explain in part why frost injury is more serious in limiting the crop of Stayman, Winesap, Delicious and some other varieties than of such varieties as Jonathan and Grimes. This early thinning, however, is desirable in normal seasons when there is no frost injury.

THE POPPY SALE

As per usual the American Legion Auxiliary's Poppy Day sale went over big again this year. With little or no effort the Auxiliary disposed of 1500 of these little mementoes. It is a custom which has been in existence practically ever since the organization of the American Legion and its Auxiliary to wear a poppy on Memorial Day in honor of the brave men who gave up their lives during the World War, many of whom lie under poppies in Flanders Field.

The sale this year was held Saturday, May 21st.

This little flower is the official flower of the American Legion and the proceeds of the sale of same each year by the Auxiliary is used exclusively for the relief of veterans of the World War and their families. The unit to Howard Hall Post has been very successful in their sale of these same little flowers for the past few years, they having made the poppies themselves instead of buying them and therefore saving about $15 on the thousand for them. To be sure it takes much more time but the credit for the work this year goes to Mrs. A. A. Parrett who made over half of them herself.

It would have been an easy task for the Auxiliary to have sold more than twice the number of poppies this year but owing to the fact that many of the ladies were unable to help in the making of them the number was limited. But the fact that they were made increased the profits of the Auxiliary to a great extent.

The exact amount of money realized from the sale is not definitely known at this time but the Auxiliary is very thankful to the Circleville Athletic Club who permitted the sale of the poppies at their 30th anniversary celebration on which they realized about $45. The total amount of money realized from this sale will be announced later.

Makes "Bad Lands" Bloom With Lilacs

Midland, S. D.—Where the rolling grazing lands of South Dakota's western prairies fringe into the bad lands J. E. Canney, Civil war veteran, has developed a lilac farm which blossoms in an arid region.

Every spring on a Sunday set apart hundreds of ranchers and prairie dwellers come in their automobiles and on horseback from a hundred-mile radius to picnic among the blooms, and every one goes home with a handful of flowers.

Canney started his "lilac farm" more than a decade ago to prove that landscaping was feasible in a region then hardly marked by a tree or a plant other than the short buffalo grass of the ranges. His verdant acres have become an oasis for travelers.

Epidemic's Big Toll

An estimate of the deaths caused by the influenza epidemic, 1918 and 1919, was made by Laumonier in the Gazette des Hospitiaux, September 30 and October 2, 1919. He says that for the total of 11 months, allowing for analogous mortalities in Central Asia and the Far East, the world mortality could easily have exceeded 25,000,000.

Seeking and Finding

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright)

WHEN Tom Higgins boarded the suburban train at Forest Hills and took the only seat that was vacant in the coach he immediately wondered if all the fellows on the train were out of their minds or if their senses were paralyzed to a degree of imbecility.

The rest of the seat which Tom had secured was occupied by the most lovely thing from the feminine world that he had ever looked upon. She was fair and violet eyed and had a smile that would lure a hermit from his cave.

The trip into the Pennsylvania station was one of joy and great despair for, while Tom was thrilled at the very proximity of the fair one, he could not but realize that a scant half hour would see her vanish into the throngs of mere human beings in New York and she would be lost to him perhaps forever.

He glanced at the dainty white hands beside him and once in awhile gazed long and earnestly out of the window, thus gaining for himself a slanting view of exquisite profile. Also he noted that her bag had the initials C. W. on it.

The only clue he managed to obtain was the fact that the book she was reading belonged to the Sea Cliff Library.

Could that mere fact be in any way a stepping stone to establishing first her identity, then securing an introduction? It might. One never knows.

When she had disappeared from his life at the station Tom felt a great, great wave of loneliness sweep over him. Was ever a sensible man so completely lacking in sense? Out of the scores of fine girls he knew he couldn't see the charm of anyone in particular. But a perfect stranger, whom he happens to sit beside in a train sends his heart entirely into that realm called love.

Tom decided to seek rooms in Sea Cliff. He might as well spend his board money there as at Forest Hills. He would undoubtedly find mutual acquaintances somewhere and would attend all the social affairs he could and go to every dance at every hotel. "Also," said Tom to himself, "I shall join the Sea Cliff library and devour every book they have and also find out who they have on their lists of readers whose initials are C. W."

And all of these things Tom did, out with no results whatever. He saw her once or twice on the train, but the seat beside her was fully occupied on these rare occasions and Tom found himself green with jealousy and hating the great hulking man who sat chatting with her.

But as for meeting her—well, that seemed like the last thing that Tom was able to effect. And weeks flew past. Weeks void of hope for Tom.

And down in the lampshade department of the big firm of decorators Connie Wendell worked diligently on a perfect dream of a lampshade. She was fast becoming one of the most artistic of the many designers employed by the huge concern and was rather hoping that before long she could strike out for herself.

In fact, Connie decided to take the bull by the horns and put in her letter of resignation right away. The time was ripe for making her start.

Next morning when the forewoman of the lampshade department learned of Connie's intended resignation consternation reigned within her. She sought immediate conference with Drycourt himself, head of the great firm.

Once within that sacred office she burst into indignant protest.

"If we let Miss Wendell leave us she will be snatched up at once by any of ten big decorators. She's a treasure. Those dream poems of shades that have been going out to the mansions at Southampton—they were one and all designed by her. Do speak with her and try to hold her, Mr. Higgins."

"Send this paragon along then, Mrs. Ward," grinned the famous Drycourt, "we mustn't jeopardize our business."

"You're doing a wise thing," said Mrs. Ward and went immediately to interview the "treasure."

Connie looked up and smiled—a truly wonderful smile.

"It's nice to know I'm giving satisfaction," she said and went off to the office.

The great Drycourt, in other words Tom Higgins, looked up as Miss Wendell came into the office.

Then he sprang to his feet and rushed forward to meet the girl who had entered, as if she had brought with her the sun, moon and stars of his existence.

"Great scott, you!" was Tom's remarkable greeting.

Connie's amazement showed plainly in her face. She didn't exactly draw back, but she certainly wondered a bit.

"How long have you been employed by my concern?" demanded Tom Higgins.

"Why—about eighteen months," said Connie.

"And you have an idea you are going to leave us—is that it?"

"Well—yes, sir," said Connie.

"Don't stir me," Tom almost roared.

"And you can change your mind about leaving. I have a good many things I must tell you so you had better have lunch with me today. Is that a date?" demanded Tom.

"Yes," said Connie meekly and the wonderful smile was quite personal this time.

PRIVATE CAR PROVIDED FOR PIG JOURNEY

Demonstration Train of B. & O. in Orient and Mt. Sterling June 6.

Twenty-five pigs have been granted passes and given a private car to travel southeastern Ohio for two weeks.

Three pens are available on this car. Each pen will be occupied by a family of pigs which have never seen a railroad before. One family of sleek coated pigs was raised on the farm of William Taylor, a Butler county swine grower, who has been practicing worm control measures for four years.

Another family on the car does not boast about where they were raised, because they are much older and are much less attractive in appearance. They have been handicapped by the round worms. The sand on which they are sleeping during their excursion is so much preferable to the dirt and filth to which they have been accustomed that they hope their health and appearance will rapidly improve.

The third compartment is occupied by a mother and family of just a few weeks. These pigs will show the effects of the lung stage of the round worm. In addition to the private car on which the pigs will ride there will be a demonstration car filled with other exhibits and a lecture car, according to O. K. Quivey, general agricultural agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railway, who will be in charge of the train.

In the exhibit car will be shown all stages of the common round worm from the egg thru the lung stage to the adult form which is found in the intestines. Microscopes will be used to show the larva which are too small to be visible to the eye.

Lungs from infected pigs will be exhibited to show the injury done by the larva during the two weeks they spend in lung tissue. Simple measures which control these parasites will be explained in this car. These practices, if followed, will control some diseases and most other parasites.

Bowls of feeds will be on display in order to teach farmers the best sources of protein to use in addition to corn. The Ohio Experiment Station recommends this mixture after conducting several trials. Mineral mixtures are also shown and recommended under certain conditions by the Experiment Station. Mr. Quivey has followed the results of worm control demonstrations conducted by the university in various counties in Ohio and other states. The success of these demonstrations has been responsible for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad running a special train to spread these practices among the farmers of southwestern Ohio so that their hog production may become more profitable. The train will be in Orient Monday 8:30 a. m. to 12 m., and Mt. Sterling Monday 1:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. June 6.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Albert Hill, son of Francis M., and Mary Jane Hatfield Hill, was born in Monroe township, October 17, 1865, and departed this life at his home in Darbyville, May 18, 1927, aged 61 years, seven months and one day.

He was united in marriage to Clara Ida Ambrose and to this union were born four children, three of whom preceded their father in death; Thomas Theodore, Benjamin H., and Lucy Ruth. He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and one son, Lawson, and of his immediate family he is survived by four brothers and one sister; Seth, of Five Points; Orlando of Mt. Sterling; Milton, of Derby; Simon, of Columbus and Mrs. Rhoda Daugherty, of London.

He served as trustee of Muhlenberg township for sixteen years, which is to say that his services were well rendered.

The deceased was a member of the M. W. A., of Williamsport, the brotherhood of Five Points and the Parent-Teacher association, of Darbyville. He was a driver of one of the school busses for several years and was loved by the children of our school.

He was a considerate husband and father and a good neighbor and always met his friends with a hearty welcome and a friendly smile. In February his sickness made it necessary for a severe operation from which he never recovered and the dread disease slowly sapped his life away, but he was never heard to murmur or complain.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt and sincere thanks to all who have assisted us in any way during the illness and burial of our husband and father.

Mrs. Clara Hill,
Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Hill.

ITALIAN FLIER SAFE AT THE AZORES

HOPPED OFF AT TREPASSY, N. F. FORCED DOWN BY DENSE FOG

Francesco De Pinedo, the Aviator Who has Flown Over Four Continents In An Airoplane Meets His Waterloo Flying Over the Atlantic Ocean Near Portuguese Territory—His Airship, the Santa Marie. Found With Navigator Safely Floating On the Bosom of the Ocean and Was Towed Into Fayal.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo has been towed into Fayal, Azores, according to a radio message picked up at Lisbon, Portugal, late Tuesday.

An earlier radio message received directly from Commander de Pinedo, stated that he was being towed to the Azores and that he needed no further assistance.

The commander suffered no injury in the descent of his plane to the sea.

Wireless advices from Lisbon to la Nacion said that Commander Francesco de Pinedo landed 150 miles from the Azores, because of fog and that his machine was being towed to Horta.

One of the wings of the ship was damaged and there was other minor damage, it was said.

The first definite word that Francesco de Pinedo, four-continent aviator, apparently was safe was reported Tuesday afternoon by the Radio Corporation of America to The Associated Press in a radiogram picked up by the Radio Corporation's coastal station at Chatham, Massachusetts, reporting "all well" with his plane Santa Maria II.

The Radio corporation said the message, originating with the steamer Cabo Torres, was relayed thru the liner Leviathan and read:

"Sailing Vessel Infante Vessagres, bound southeast towing Italian hydro airplane Santa Maria Savoia 10016. All Well."

The Cabo Torres was at latitude 41.25 north and longitude 32.28 west when the sailing vessel towing the Italian's plane was sighted at 12:50 GMT. or 8:05 Eastern Daylight time.

The location of the sailing vessel was 200 miles northwest of the main body of the Azores, but only 100 miles or so northwest of Flores, the most westerly island of the group. Flores, a mountainous spot, has two towns on it, Santa Cruz and Lagens.

Late Tuesday night the news that the Spanish steamer Cadatorres had seen the Santa Maria II, Commander Francesco de Pinedo's plane, in tow by the sailing ship Infante Vessagres near the Azores, was confirmed.

Later again radio messages from Corvos Island, the Azores, and other messages from Lisbon, Portugal, reported that the Santa Maria was being towed to Fayal Island.

ing towed to Fayal Island.

The Ministry of Aviation then received and announced the report that De Pinedo and his comrades were safe and well.

Immense crowds went delirious with joy, shouting and cheering as the bulletins were announced.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo's four-continent flight was started from Gagliari, Sardinia, February 13. On February 22, he flew from the Cape Verde Islands to Fernando do Noronha, off the coast of Brazil.

The Italian continued his flight thru South America and arrived in New Orleans on March 29. Flying to the Pacific coast, his plane was burned when riding at anchor at Roosevelt dam, Arizona, April 5. A new plane was sent to him from Italy, and he flew in it from New York to Florida, thence to Chicago, Montreal, Quebec, Shippegan, New Brunswick, Trepassy, Newfoundland—hopping off for the Azores early Tuesday morning.

Dynamiting the Levee Below New Orleans

This photograph, made at the instant of the explosion, shows the actual dynamiting of the Mississippi levee in St. Bernard parish when that and adjoining parishes were sacrificed to the flood waters of the Mississippi river to save the city of New Orleans. Afterward it was necessary to blast other openings in the dike and the operation was successful so far as New Orleans was concerned, but, of course, the farm and trapping lands between there and Lake Borgne were inundated and the loss there was considerable. All the inhabitants had been evacuated.

RULING ON INSURANCE IS ISSUED BY TURNER.

County commissioners have no authority to purchase and pay for burglar or hold-up insurance for the county treasurer or for any other county officer, nor have they authority to pay for insurance against forgery. Attorney General Turner ruled Tuesday.

The opinion was given at request of the state bureau of inspection of public offices.

In answer to another question from Vernon M. Riegel, state director of education, Turner ruled that there is no constitutional or statutory inhibition preventing a member of a county board of education from serving at the same time as a member of the general assembly.

Clerks of courts are without authority to pay trustees of county law library associations any part of the county's portion of fines imposed and collected by the common pleas court for violation of the Crabbe law, he ruled on a third question submitted by E. B. Brown, Hardin county prosecutor.

SHERIFF DAVIS AND DEPUTIES CAPTURE STILL

Raid Was Made in Wayne
Township and One Man and
Two Women are in Jail.

A ten gallon still was found on the farm of John W. Haughn in Wayne township Tuesday and some fifty gallons of mash and between three and four gallons of the finished product were captured.

The still was found in the home of a tenant named Edgar Davidson, and with him were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gilmore, of Williamsport. Sheriff Davis' department brought in Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Edgar Davidson. Mr. Davidson, who is a cripple, was too ill of tuberculosis and could not be taken from his bed.

When Sheriff Davis and his deputies surrounded the house Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock the moonshiners were taken completely by surprise. They hurriedly emptied some of the newly made whisky from vessels which were hidden in a hay mow. The mash was destroyed by the officers. The women made strenuous objections to being brought in by the officers, but they are now in the county jail. They will have a hearing before Judge J. W. Adkins.

Sheriff Davis and his deputies have been trying for some time to run down this bunch, but could not locate the place where they manufactured the whisky.

The warm of the still was hidden out in the yard and was under a wooden pile. The still boiler was a ten gallon cream container and to an ordinary observer, looked like a receptacle that farmers use to send cream to a dairy.

TO BUILD BUNGALOW.

L. R. Young, the contractor and builder, has secured the contract to build a six room frame bungalow for Misses Daisy and Viola Woolaver. The house will be built on Gilford road, near the residence of J. J. Bremer.

PHONE RATES DISCUSSION TUESDAY EVE

Protest to be Filed With Utilities Commission—Doctor Clarke on Dentistry.

The meeting of the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening was devoted to two local subjects, the dentists and the Citizens Telephone company. Dr. H. R. Clarke, the dean of dentists, was the speaker for his science and confreres in the dental profession.

Dr. H. S. Chenowith with the city's first dentist back in 1859, the city directory mentions Dr. E. C. Clarke and Dr. William R. Lilly, the fathers of the speaker and Dr. E. J. Lilly and Dr. R. F. Lilly.

Altho Dr. Clarke spoke of the fact that Dr. Chenowith was the first dentist, Dr. M. B. Strong and Dr. S. Barbour ran advertising cards in the issues of this paper back in 1831 and 1832.

Dentistry, said the speaker, is practically a recent science and is not much over a hundred years old. It has made great strides in the past fifty years. Circleville now has seven dentists.

J. R. Noecker, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the increased rates, which the Citizens Telephone company will ask the Utilities commission of Ohio to grant them, made his report, which was statistical showing the organization of the company back in 1901, when the company was organized with a capital of $200,000.

Following Mr. Noecker's report, Attorney Charles Gerhardt quoted the law on procedure, as to how the telephone company could get across and charge the increased rates, provided no protest was registered before June 1. Mr. Gerhardt advised the chamber of commerce to get busy. If you don't, they will get what they are asking for. The Logan Gas company pulled a trick on the city council and this was followed by both the Ohio Utilities company and the Pickaway Water company, now known as the Public Utilities corporation.

The chamber of commerce passed a resolution instructing the secretary to file a formal protest and complaint with the Utilities commission of Ohio on behalf of that body and the subscribers or patrons generally of the telephone company against the reasonableness of said proposed change and raise of rates.

THE STAGE

Ideal Career For Girl, Says Mrs. Belmont.

There has never been a moment when the stage offered a girl such a career as it does today," says Mrs. August Belmont, the former celebrated actress, Eleanor Robson, who is now a leader in New York society. Quoted by Gene Markey in an article in this week's Liberty, Mrs. Belmont explains:

"Once a girl wins success, the world is hers. The theater is the greatest playground in the world and its favorite daughters achieve a fame that cannot be measured in electric lights and newspaper prominence. The stage has advanced tremendously in the last dozen years.

Plays are more interesting than ever before," Mrs. Belmont continues. "Today's best plays offer an infinitely broader field for the actress, and golden opportunities for interesting characterizations. And as the theater improves, the stage as a career grows more honorable. There is no career to match it for a woman.

"Moreover, a successful actress enjoys the rare privilege of meeting the most interesting personalities of her day—in the worlds of art, literature, music and politics.

"If I had a daughter—and she had talent—I would rather she chose the stage than any other career."

EXPERIMENT STATION FOR CIRCLEVILLE

The Ohio Experiment Station "on wheels" will arrive, via the Pennsylvania Railway, Friday, 3, in readiness for Livestock Day, Saturday June 4, at Circleville.

Reservations have been made on this "Livestock Special" for 110 head of cattle, 140 head of hogs and 84 head of lambs which have been on "feeding trials" at the station this winter. The exhibit will be arranged so that each lot may be placarded showing initial weight of stock kinds and amount of feeding, rate of cost of grains. Livestock specialists, Ohio State Experiment Station and Ohio University will explain the methods and results of these feeding demonstrations.

A comparison of cost price and sales price on feeder cattle, hogs, and lambs should emphasize the importance of the lessons to be gained through these demonstrations. Farm Bureau officials, livestock feeders and breeders, experiment station and Ohio Livestock Specialists, County Agents, Service Managers, Rotarians, and Chamber of Commerce and Newspapers are all co-operating to make this program a success.

Will you be one of the four thousand in attendance, Livestock Day, June 4, in Circleville.

Not Parental Models

The biological survey says that the males of some shore birds, among which are the Phalaropes, incubate the eggs and care for the young. The cowbird and the coo-coo of Europe lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, neither of the parents hatching them.

ELECTRICITY
Dominant Factor In Present-day Life.

Addressing the Industrial Committee of the Spokane, Wash., Chamber of Commerce, Lewis A. Lewis said:
Suppose for a moment that all electric service in any city should suddenly cease forever; that telegraph and cable lines would cease to hum with public and private messages, that telephones everywhere went out of commission, that radio, so recently found, was lost again, that the trolley lines stopped, ignition on the autos failed to function, that electrically-driven industry stood still, police signals and fire alarms failed to work and fire pumps failed to pump water to the heights, and when night came, darkness could not longer be dissipated by pressing a button or snapping a switch, the streets remained in gloom and citizens everywhere had to carry candles.
"A moment's reflection will show that such a catastrophe would strike the city a blow almost as overwhelming as that which struck Pompeii. Older means of lighting and locomotion could be resumed, but the most distinguishing features of modern life and present day civilization would become like the tombs of the ancient Egyptians. Business would be literally paralyzed."

LIFE IS THE GREATEST ASSET

Reduced to an economic formula human life remains a much more important asset to a community than all its material possessions, it is asserted by the Insurance Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. To support its statement it cites the estimate of one of the country's outstanding statisticians that the value of the lives of the country's citizens, based on their future earning power, is more than $1,500,000,000,000. This would be five times as great as the nation's material wealth, valued today at $350,000,000,000. "The United States," says the Insurance department in a bulletin announcing a program upon which it has embarked with the co-operation of the Committee on Administrative practice of the American Public Health Association to enlist chambers of commerce throughout the country in health conservation, "sustains a tremendous economic loss each year due to sickness and death. The average citizen is said to lose about seven days each year due to sickness which would correspond to a loss of 2 per cent in useful industrial or commercial productivity. As our national income is more than $60,000,000,000 a year, it is apparent that this loss alone totals considerably more than a billion dollars annually. Added to this is the cost of medical and hospital service which has been estimated to be at least $10 per capita, or more than $1,000,000,000 each year. Sickness in the United States therefore involves a direct cost of more than $2,000,000,000 annually."

Four Presidents Held Unwelcome as Students

Princeton, N. J.—Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and Grover Cleveland would never have received degrees from modern American universities, in the opinion of Prof. Walter L. Whittlessey of the politics faculty of Princeton university.
"It is not very likely that Lincoln would have come to college today," Professor Whittlessey said, "for the cost would have been prohibitive. Moreover, a mind like his would have outrun all bounds and been unwelcome in the average university."
The mind of Cleveland, who arrived at conclusions deliberately and well, was too slow to answer the gibbness demanded by educators today, according to Professor Whittlessey.
Jefferson and Franklin would have been "fired" early in their college careers, Professor Whittlessey believes, because they probably would not have submitted to the restraint placed upon present-day students.
Safer
"How many people have you shaken hands with in the course of your political career?"
"Thousands," said Senator Sorghum. "And I welcomed everyone. It is much safer to shake hands with a crowd than it is to make a political speech."

INVESTIGATE GRAY
BIGAMY CHARGES

New York, May 23.—Acting on advice from Baltimore police that Henry Judd Gray, corset salesman now in the death house at Sing Sing awaiting execution for his part in the murder of Albert Snyder, magazine art editor, may have contracted a bigamous marriage with a Baltimore girl five years ago, District Attorney Newcombe of Queens county today sent the state's attorney at Baltimore a rogues' gallery photograph and a complete description of Gray.
Baltimore officials wrote Newcombe that a Miss Caroline Probst there had made a complaint against a salesman named Henry Gray, who she said had married her five years ago. She believes the man may be Henry Judd Gray.

AMUSEMENTS

What should a girl do when, after traveling several thousand miles to visit her grandfather, she finds that he has always considered her to be a boy and that the visit of a granddaughter at that particular time would be little short of a disaster?

That is the problem that confronts Bebe Daniels in her latest Paramount comedy-drama, "Senarita," which comes to the Met theater today.

Miss Daniels solves the problem in characteristic fashion. She becomes a boy for the time being and hiding behind flourishing black mustachios and the costume of a dashing caballero she appears to the grandfather she has never seen, not as the Senorita Francesca Hernandez, but as Senor Francisco.

This is the situation upon which John McDermott has fashioned the story for what is stated by critics to be the most fascinating role that Bebe Daniels has ever played.

Supporting Miss Daniels in "Senarita" are James Hall, Paramount's new leading man who in this production makes his third appearance opposite the star; William Powell, Joan Standing, Josef Swickard, Gayne Whitman and Raoul Paoli, celebrated Italian leading man and all around European athlete, holding the continental championship for the shot put.

Clarence Badger, director of "A Kiss in a Taxi" and "The Campus Flirt" handled the megaphone on this distinctly different Bebe Daniels production.

CAPITAL CITY
MADE TO ORDER*Step Taken by Australian
Government Parallels
That of U. S.

Washington.—"By moving into a capital city made out of hand, where no town existed before, the Australian government has taken a step closely parallel to that taken by the United States in the summer of 1800, when the seat of government was moved from one of its greatest cities, Philadelphia, into a virtual wilderness," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. "Canberra, the federal city, was formally dedicated by the duke of York on May 9, and the Australian parliament began deliberations in the new capital on the same date.

"A century and a quarter has seen a great advance in the art of capital city building," continues the bulletin; "and although the residents of Canberra will find their capital, as early Washingtonians found theirs, a city made up in large part of 'magnificent distances,' at least they will have the organized comforts of modern community life such as the infant Washington could not know. One of the first things done at Canberra was to start work on a water supply system. The first unit of this has long been completed. Next, both sanitary and storm sewers were constructed; and only a little later a powerhouse was built, and a railway was extended to an existing line. There are some good streets in Canberra in place of the rude trails and muddy paths by which the American congressmen of 125 years ago found their way through thickets and across morasses between the capitol and the White House.

"The federal territory in which the new Australian capital is situated, was set apart for the purpose in December, 1900. It is near the southeastern corner of the continent close to its center of population. The territory contains 912 square miles and so is 13 times the size of the present District of Columbia.

Plans Chosen by Contest.

"Australia's new capital is to be an inland and upland city. It lies some 70 miles from the ocean, behind the dividing range of mountains that skirts the coast. It is nearly 200 miles southwest of Sydney and about 300 miles northeast of Melbourne. The site chosen for the city was formerly a sheep 'station' or ranch, an undulating upland plain with an altitude of about 1,800 feet. Scattered about are isolated hills rising 800 feet or more, while across the plain flows a small river, the Molonglo. It is in a latitude corresponding roughly to that of Chattanooga, Tenn., or Asheville, N. C.

"A world-wide contest was launched by Australia in 1911 for the submission of plans for her made-to-order capital. The first prize was won by an American, the second by a Finn, and the third by a Frenchman. The plan which has been taking shape in the Australian hills in recent years follows the American design in general, but has been modified to include some of the good points of the other winning plans, as well as changes considered necessary by the commissioners and engineers who have been entrusted with the building of the city.

"A commanding eminence south of the river was chosen as the site for the permanent capital, and about this blocks are arranged in a great circle. Lesser circles of blocks impinge upon this Capitol circuit, or exist at a distance, connected by radial avenues. North of the river, on a similar hill, a university will be built.

"Australians have profited by the errors of other capital builders, and have provided against the topsy-turvy propensity of cities to 'just grow,' as did Washington during a certain era of its existence. No lots or areas in the district will be sold outright. Instead 99-year leases will be given, with reappraisal of values every 10 years. The leases will pay rent amounting to 5 per cent on the appraised values. By withholding leases in certain sections of the city and granting them in others, the commission of three men in charge of Canberra can control its growth. The commission also requires that no structure be erected until the plans for it have received official approval.

Dream City to Grow Slowly.

"About $25,000,000 has been expended so far toward the development of Canberra, but it still lacks much of having the appearance of a city or even of a town such as Americans or Europeans are used to. This is because the commission resolutely set about districting the future city. It now has the appearance, therefore, of a group of villages scattered over a plain. Australia is willing to bring its dream city into existence slowly. As an example, the parliament buildings are considered to be 'temporary' structures; yet they will probably be used for several generations before being superseded by a permanent capitol on the site reserved for it.

"A definite system of physical development is being adhered to. The center of the city will be given over to public buildings, parks and lakes. Off to itself is the nucleus of the shopping district; elsewhere is a modified industrial area for laundries, cold storage and the like. At a distance the district for inexpensive homes already has its scores of small bungalows. The section for more pretentious residences lies off in another direction. So the city is being shaped."

The Wisdom of Fools

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

DELICIA MOSELEY sang mockingly a fragment of pot-house ballad, caught from her cockney nurse:

Go dress yourself, Dinah, in gorgeous array,
And take yourself a husband both gallant and gray.

"Why the carol, darling? Hath music of this sort charms to soothe the parental breast?" Norman Blake demanded icily.

Colonel Moseley craved a son-in-law—not on general principles, but as a passport to certain paradise. That is, to the winning of Madame Delano: "The one woman I ever loved—really loved, sir, more beautiful than ever—and worth a million into the bargain," he had explained to Judge Blake, Norman's father, and the legal salvation of the Moseley menage.

Madame Delano also remembered—she admitted the fact not a bit coyly. Moreover she was lonely. The million had been hardly earned by twenty-five years of roving and comfortless if costly existence as Lemuel Alden Delano's wife. He had seemed at the altar the very moral and pattern of an aristocratic corpse. But he lived on for many years. In the second year of her martyrdom, Archibald Moseley had turned fickle—marrying out of hand Delicia Vere, whom, amongst all women, Madame Delano most hated. Then Delicia had died, leaving a daughter of her name. There indeed lay the root of Madame Delano's decree. "If you want me, you must get rid of that girl!" she said to Moseley.

He, however, had had the grace to rate her soundly for such unwomanly feeling. Something came of it—six months' truce. Surely that was long enough for Delicia to pick and choose from her swarming beaux a man quite to her mind. When Delicia had countered: "How if I happen not to be to his mind?" Madame had sent word that the prospect of one day inheriting the Delano millions would mend surely and swiftly any such small flaw.

This latest bulletin from the enemy camp inspired further balladry—Delicia broke into mournful falsetto with:

O! Pappy, O! Pappy, I've made up my mind
Unto marriage just yet I don't feel inclined.
Her very large fortune I'll gladly give o'er,
If you'll let me live single a year or two more?

"Take that back—if you know what's good for us," Norman thundered, trying hard to frown.

"Dear me! Where, I ask, do you come in?" Delicia retorted.

"You're forgetting the painful dearth of men with my looks and talent," Norman flung back loftily. Then the unregenerate pair danced up and down the big old parlor. As Delicia dropped her final curtsy, Norman exploded: "All we lack of a perfect match is a mere half million—wonder can't we persuade madame of the fact? Also that, if she listens to reason, we'll put the comeliest on the old boy—a marriage contract, you know—so there'll be two happy families instead of two waiting for a dead woman's shoes."

"But—you wouldn't take me just as I stand," Delicia broke in.

"Is that a dare? Just you try me," from Norman.

"How much money have you in hand?" Delicia demanded. Lightning exploration of pockets resulted in the startling total of eleven dollars and fifty cents. "I see?" said Delicia. "I'm sought for my money—I have twenty dollars cash—and five hundred in the bank."

"Are you game? Really?" Norman asked huskily. Delicia nodded.

They didn't elope, this whimsical pair—simply walked into Judge Blake's office, and got themselves tied tight and fast in record time. The judge choked up a bit over the final words—the foolhardiness of it had taken his breath. What could the future hold for two so sadly spoiled? It took him all aback to have Norman ask stolidly: "D'ye want a brisk young partner, judge—sober and diligent, with a wife to support?"

Support her he did, asking no favors. Instead of a tour, the pair looked up a bungalow, bought it on faith and credit—due to the five hundred in the bank—and therein faced a happy future.

Six months Madame Delano sat tight. Delicia had removed herself from the picture—"but really, my dear, the whole thing was too shocking!" Then suddenly, her long, long loneliness, the empty heart and house in wait for her, got in their fine work. She sent for Judge Blake privily—as privily she kept him busy for a fortnight. Then Greenbrier neighborhood had even a bigger sensation—not in the Delano-Moseley wedding, but in the amazing fact that Madame had parted her million evenly to the fraction of a hair, endowing Norman in fee with his moiety, and settling the rich remainder upon a potential Margaret Delano Blake, Delicia's eldest daughter.

So was the wisdom of fools abundantly justified—for all the four most nearly concerned lived long and happily ever after.

Cache of Confederate Muskets and Ammunition Found While Excavating Bridge in North Carolina.

Raleigh, N. C.—Seven feet below the bottom of Deep river a cache of Confederate muskets and ammunition was brought to light by a force of the highway commission when excavating for a bridge between High Point and Greensboro. The woodwork on the muskets was excellently preserved after lying in the mud and water for half a century, according to Charles Ross, assistant attorney general assigned to the highway commission.

Five and ten-inch shells as well as cannon balls, still packed in the boxes in which they were shipped, were included in the ammunition found. The five-inch shells had wooden plugs which had allowed the water to seep through and wet the powder inside. Some of these were emptied, but the big shells presented another problem. These were plugged with pewter or lead, and the workmen were not at all sure that the moisture had penetrated them, hence the fear of striking a percussion cap had prevented any of the big shells being opened when Mr. Ross left the scene.

"They put some of the shells and cannon balls in my car to haul them up to the top of the hill, and I was right relieved when they took them out," Mr. Ross stated.

Local tradition has it that two carloads of ammunition was shipped from Richmond during the Civil war, but the "damn Yankees" succeeded in burning the railroad bridge at this point before the train hauling the supplies could cross it. The Confederate soldiers loaded all the ammunition possible on wagons, and then threw the remainder in the river to keep the Yankees from using it.

SPEARHEAD CLEW TO VIKINGS IN U. S.

Flint Different From That Used by Indians.

Orono, Maine.—A large flint spearhead made of material different from Indian spearheads of this state is arousing renewed interest in the stories of Norse adventures in North America in the Eleventh century. The spearhead, which was found on the beach at Pemaquid several years ago, is now in the possession of Walter B. Smith, who has made extensive studies of Indian remains in this region.

In a report on the possibility of finding traces of the Norsemen, just made by Mr. Smith, he states that the spearhead may be Indian in origin. He points out, however, that it is not of flint, such as the Indians used, but seems to be identical with a rock called helleflinta, which is well known in Scandinavia. The fact that Eleventh century Vikings had passed the age of stone tools adds to the mystery.

Where the Vikings landed in this country is not exactly known. The place described as Vinland is believed to have been somewhere along the Labrador coast, and the accounts say that some of the explorers stayed several years.

"If the sagas are true," Mr. Smith says, "it seems improbable that some of the numerous bays of the extensive coast of Maine could have remained unknown to these hardy voyagers. They would have been lured here by the spirit of adventure or the hope of gain, or driven hither by storms."

Mr. Smith has spent some time vainly seeking Indian village sites and burial places around Pemaquid, in the hope of finding objects which the Indians might have obtained from the Norsemen. A number of shell heaps proved that Indians had once lived there, but no trace of European work was found in any of these.

Tools of iron possessed by the Norsemen would probably be masses of rust by this time, he points out. But most objects of copper, bronze, lead and silver would be still recognizable. Shards of Norse pottery might still survive, and also glass, particularly beads.

"If Norsemen actually discovered North America at that early date, I believe there is still a possibility of finding proof of it, unless such proof is already destroyed," Mr. Smith concludes.

Layman Sits as Judge
in Court of Appeals

Trenton, N. J.—Joseph L. Dear of Jersey City shares with George Van Bushkirk of Hackensack the distinction of being the only layman on the bench of the highest court of the state—the only court in which laymen sit. They receive $40 for each day spent in court.

Although the constitution of 1844 empowers governors to appoint laymen to any court of the state, they have always been appointed to the Court of Errors and Appeals. This court renders its decisions by ballot rather than by individual opinion, being one of the few courts in the United States which does so. The procedure is a relic of Colonial days, when the court was made up of the governor and his council of county representatives.

The bench of Errors and Appeals today is composed of 16 judges—the chancellor, chief justice, his associate justices and six special judges.

LEAGUE LEADERS

Defeat Circleville Eagles In Good Game By 3 To 2 Score.

The Circleville Eagle team lost a heart breaker game to the league leading West Jefferson aggregation by a score of 3 to 2, Sunday afternoon at the Mason lot.

A peculiar circumstance was apparently the cause of the defeat. The two teams had battled up to the seventh frame to a one to one tie. In this inning Thomas, the visitors' center fielder hit a hot one right through the box. The ball struck Kanaval on his left leg. The pitcher by a fine effort and snap throw recovered the ball in time to retire Thomas at first, but it developed that as a pitcher Kanaval was through for the day. A clean hit followed in this inning without any scoring, but when Kanaval went to the center of the field in the eighth he was quite sick as a result of the blow and the visitors jumped on him for three hits which with a sacrifice and a long fly put two runs across.

Circleville came back in their half of the eighth, scored one and had the tying run on the bases but dubbed their chance by bad judgment in base running.

Taken all in all though it was a nice game of base ball, and while the fans thought the locals should have copped they got the worth of their money.

Two fine catches were made in the outfield, one by Schell when he raced to center to take Stoker's drive, and then by a nice throw doubling Longshore at first who was headed around the bags, as it looked impossible for Schell to reach the ball.

In the fifth Thomas, the visitors' center fielder robbed Stewart of a hit when he raced in and took his line drive at his shoe tops, rolling over several times after catching the ball. Thomas also started a snappy double when he went in the air after Osborn's liner and caught Kerns off second.

Longshore, the West Jefferson kid flier, grew unsteady in the fourth and retired in favor of the veteran Fred Bruck who twirled one of his usual good games. After Kanaval was forced out of the game Dougherty pitched the final frame for Circleville and fanned two of the three men who faced him.

Carroll will play in Circleville next Sunday.

FARM PHONESARE TIME AND MONEY SAVERS

Out of 200,000 Pennsylvania farms, 124,000, or 62 per cent, have telephones.

The diversified farmer's time is worth something every day in the year; and the telephone is the cheapest, best time saver ever invented, for much of the business of the farm.

The telephone is a hired man who eats nothing, who will not forget his orders, who will not flirt or elope with the hired girl, who will not set fire to the barn with his careless pipe or cigarette, who will not strike for higher wages just when the need is greatest. A farm phone is almost as necessary as land or house or barn.

Traffic on a busy main road near Eourne, England, was held up for ten minutes while a duck laid an egg. A policeman had halted automobiles when the duck started to waddle across the road. DIVIDES

Apple Varieties Into Blossom Groups.

Apple varieties differ in the severity of the first drop of flowers, which occurs one to two weeks after the petals fall, F. S. Howlett, assistant in horticulture at the Ohio Experiment Station, finds while making an extensive study of blossoming, pollination, and fruit setting.

Varieties, he says, may be divided roughly into two groups based on differences in fall of blossoms. In the first group are such varieties as Baldwin, Jonathan, Grimes, Rome Beauty, Wealthy, Yellow Transparent, Banana and Oldenburg, which tend to pass through the first drop with a high average number of fruits remaining to a spur.

The second group includes Stayman, Winesap, Arkansas, Arkansas Black, varieties that retain only one or two fruits to a cluster after the first drop. Delicious and Rhode Island Greening thin themselves heavily at the first drop, but not usually so severely as the varieties of the Winesap group.

These differences are attributed by Mr. Howlett to some factor other than pollination, as several varieties have a considerable number of flowers that cannot set fruit no matter how well pollinated. They explain in part why frost injury is more serious in limiting the crop of Stayman, Winesap, Delicious and some other varieties than of such varieties as Jonathan and Grimes. This early thinning, however, is desirable in normal seasons when there is no frost injury.

THE POPPY SALE

As per usual the American Legion Auxiliary's Poppy Day sale went over big again this year. With little or no effort the Auxiliary disposed of 1500 of these little mementoes. It is a custom which has been in existence practically ever since the organization of the American Legion and its Auxiliary to wear a poppy on Memorial Day in honor of the brave men who gave up their lives during the World War, many of whom lie under poppies in Flanders Field.

The sale this year was held Saturday, May 21st.

This little flower is the official flower of the American Legion and the proceeds of the sale of same each year by the Auxiliary is used exclusively for the relief of veterans of the World War and their families. The unit to Howard Hall Post has been very successful in their sale of these same little flowers for the past few years, they having made the poppies themselves instead of buying them and therefore saving about $15 on the thousand for them. To be sure it takes much more time but the credit for the work this year goes to Mrs. A. A. Parrett who made over half of them herself.

It would have been an easy task for the Auxiliary to have sold more than twice the number of poppies this year but owing to the fact that many of the ladies were unable to help in the making of them the number was limited. But the fact that they were made increased the profits of the Auxiliary to a great extent.

The exact amount of money realized from the sale is not definitely known at this time but the Auxiliary is very thankful to the Circleville Athletic Club who permitted the sale of the poppies at their 30th anniversary celebration on which they realized about $45. The total amount of money realized from this sale will be announced later.

Makes "Bad Lands"

Bloom With Lilacs

Midland, S. D.—Where the rolling grazing lands of South Dakota's western prairies fringe into the bad lands J. E. Canney, Civil war veteran, has developed a lilac farm which blossoms in an arid region.

Every spring on a Sunday set apart hundreds of ranchers and prairie dwellers come in their automobiles and on horseback from a hundred-mile radius to picnic among the blooms, and every one goes home with a handful of flowers.

Canney started his "lilac farm" more than a decade ago to prove that landscaping was feasible in a region then hardly marked by a tree or a plant other than the short buffalo grass of the ranges. His verdant acres have become an oasis for travelers.

Epidemic's Big Toll

An estimate of the deaths caused by the influenza epidemic, 1918 and 1919, was made by Laumonier in the Gazette des Hopitaux, September 30 and October 2, 1919. He says that for the total of 11 months, allowing for analogous mortalities in Central Asia and the Far East, the world mortality could easily have exceeded 25,000,000.

Seeking and Finding

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright)

WHEN Tom Higgins boarded the suburban train at Forest Hills and took the only seat that was vacant in the coach he immediately wondered if all the fellows on the train were out of their minds or if their senses were paralyzed to a degree of imbecility.

The rest of the seat which Tom had secured was occupied by the most lovely thing from the feminine world that he had ever looked upon. She was fair and violet eyed and had a smile that would lure a hermit from his cave.

The trip into the Pennsylvania station was one of joy and great despair for, while Tom was thrilled at the very proximity of the fair one, he could not but realize that a scant half hour would see her vanish into the throngs of mere human beings in New York and she would be lost to him perhaps forever.

He glanced at the dainty white hands beside him and once in awhile gazed long and earnestly out of the window, thus gaining for himself a slanting view of exquisite profile. Also he noted that her bag had the initials C. W. on it.

The only clue he managed to obtain was the fact that the book she was reading belonged to the Sea Cliff library.

Could that mere fact be in any way a stepping stone to establishing first her identity, then securing an introduction? It might. One never knows.

When she had disappeared from his life at the station Tom felt a great, great wave of loneliness sweep over him. Was ever a sensible man so completely lacking in sense? Out of the scores of fine girls he knew he couldn't see the chagm of anyone in particular. But a perfect stranger, whom he happens to sit beside in a train sends his heart entirely into that realm called love.

Tom decided to seek rooms in Sea Cliff. He might as well spend his board money there as at Forest Hills. He would undoubtedly find mutual acquaintances somewhere and would attend all the social affairs he could and go to every dance at every hotel. "Also," said Tom to himself, "I shall join the Sea Cliff library and devour every book they have and also find out who they have on their lists of readers whose initials are C. W."

And all of these things Tom did, out with no results whatever. He saw her once or twice on the train, but the seat beside her was fully occupied on these rare occasions and Tom found himself green with jealousy and hating the great hulking man who sat chatting with her.

But as for meeting her—well, that seemed like the last thing that Tom was able to effect. And weeks flew past. Weeks void of hope for Tom.

And down in the lampshade department of the big firm of decorators Connie Wendell worked diligently on a perfect dream of a lampshade. She was fast becoming one of the most artistic of the many designers employed by the huge concern and was rather hoping that before long she could strike out for herself.

In fact, Connie decided to take the bull by the horns and put in her letter of resignation right away. The time was ripe for making her start.

Next morning when the forewoman of the lampshade department learned of Connie's intended resignation consternation reigned within her. She sought immediate conference with Drycourt himself, head of the great firm.

Once within that sacred office she burst into indignant protest.

"If we let Miss Wendell leave us she will be snatched up at once by any of ten big decorators. She's a treasure. Those dream poems of shades that have been going out to the mansions at Southampton—they were one and all designed by her. Do speak with her and try to hold her, Mr. Higgins."

"Send this paragon along then, Mrs. Ward," grinned the famous Drycourt, "we mustn't jeopardize our business."

"You're doing a wise thing," said Mrs. Ward and went immediately to interview the "treasure."

Connie looked up and smiled—a truly wonderful smile.

"It's nice to know I'm giving satisfaction," she said and went off to the office.

The great Drycourt, in other words Tom Higgins, looked up as Miss Wendell came into the office.

Then he sprang to his feet and rushed forward to meet the girl who had entered, as if she had brought with her the sun, moon and stars of his existence.

"Great scott, you!" was Tom's remarkable greeting.

Connie's amazement showed plainly in her face. She didn't exactly draw back, but she certainly wondered a bit.

"How long have you been employed by my concern?" demanded Tom Higgins.

"Why—about eighteen months," said Connie.

"And you have an idea you are going to leave us—is that it?"

"Well—yes, sir," said Connie.

"Don't sir me," Tom almost roared.

"And you can change your mind about leaving. I have a good many things I must tell you so you had better have lunch with me today. Is that a date?" demanded Tom.

"Yes," said Connie meekly and the wonderful smile was quite personal this time.

PRIVATE CAR PROVIDED FOR PIG JOURNEY

Demonstration Train of B. & O. in Orient and Mt. Sterling June 6.

Twenty-five pigs have been granted passes and given a private car to travel southeastern Ohio for two weeks.

Three pens are available on this car. Each pen will be occupied by a family of pigs which have never seen a railroad before. Ono family of sleek coated pigs was raised on the farm of William Taylor, a Butler county swine grower, who has been practicing worm control measures for four years.

Another family on the car does not boast about where they were raised, because they are much older and are much less attractive in appearance. They have been handicapped by the round worms. The sand on which they are sleeping during their excursion is so much preferable to the dirt and filth to which they have been accustomed that they hope their health and appearance will rapidly improve.

The third compartment is occupied by a mother and family of just a few weeks. These pigs will show the effects of the lung stage of the round worm. In addition to the private car on which the pigs will ride there will be a demonstration car filled with other exhibits and a lecture car, according to O. K. Quivey, general agricultural agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railway, who will be in charge of the train.

In the exhibit car will be shown all stages of the common round worm from the egg thru the lung stage to the adult form which is found in the intestines. Microscopes will be used to show the larva which are too small to be visible to the eye.

Lungs from infected pigs will be exhibited to show the injury done by the larva during the two weeks they spend in lung tissue. Simple measures which control these parasites will be explained in this car. These practices, if followed, will control some diseases and most other parasites.

Bowls of feeds will be on display in order to teach farmers the best sources of protein to use in addition to corn. The Ohio Experiment Station recommends this mixture after conducting several trials. Mineral mixtures are also shown and recommended under certain conditions by the Experiment Station. Mr. Quivey has followed the results of worm control demonstrations conducted by the university in various counties in Ohio and other states. The success of these demonstrations has been responsible for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad running a special train to spread these practices among the farmers of southwestern Ohio so that their hog production may become more profitable. The train will be in Orient Monday 8:30 a. m. to 12 m. and Mt. Sterling Monday 1:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. June 6.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Albert Hill, son of Francis M., and Mary Jane Hatfield Hill, was born in Monroe township, October 17, 1865, and departed this life at his home in Darbyville, May 18, 1927, aged 61 years, seven months and one day.

He was united in marriage to Clara Ida Ambrose and to this union were born four children, three of whom preceded their father in death; Thomas Theodore, Benjamin H., and Lucy Ruth. He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and one son, Lawson, and of his immediate family he is survived by four brothers and one sister; Seth, of Five Points; Orlando of Mt. Sterling; Milton, of Derby; Simon, of Columbus and Mrs. Rhoda Daugherty, of London.

He served as trustee of Muhlenberg township for sixteen years, which is to say that his services were well rendered.

The deceased was a member of the M. W. A., of Williamsport, the brotherhood of Five Points and the Parent-Teacher association, of Darbyville. He was a driver of one of the school busses for several years and was loved by the children of our school.

He was a considerate husband and father and a good neighbor and always met his friends with a hearty welcome and a friendly smile. In February his sickness made it necessary for a severe operation from which he never recovered and the dread disease slowly sapped his life away, but he was never heard to murmur or complain.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt and sincere thanks to all who have assisted us in any way during the illness and burial of our husband and father.

ITALIAN FLIER SAFE AT THE AZORES

HOPPED OFF AT TREPASSY, N. F. FORCED DOWN BY DENSE FOG

Francesco De Pinedo, the Aviator Who has Flown Over Four Continents in An Airoplane Meets His Waterloo Flying Over the Atlantic Ocean Near Portuguese Territory—His Airship, the Santa Marie, Found With Navigator Safely Floating On the Bosom of the Ocean and Was Towed Into Fayal.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo has been towed into Fayal, Azores, according to a radio message picked up at Lisbon, Portugal, late Tuesday.

An earlier radio message received directly from Commander de Pinedo, stated that he was being towed to the Azores and that he needed no further assistance.

The commander suffered no injury in the descent of his plane to the sea.

Wireless advices from Lisbon to la Nacion said that Commander Francesco de Pinedo landed 150 miles from the Azores, because of fog and that his machine was being towed to Horta.

One of the wings of the ship was damaged and there was other minor damage, it was said.

The first definite word that Francesco de Pinedo, four-continent aviator, apparently was safe was reported Tuesday afternoon by the Radio Corporation of America to The Associated Press in a radiogram picked up by the Radio Corporation's coastal station at Chatham, Massachusetts, reporting "all well" with his plane Santa Maria II.

The Radio corporation said the message, originating with the steamer Cabo Torres, was relayed thru the liner Leviathan and read:

"Sailing Vessel Infante Vessagres, bound southeast towing Italian hydro airplane Santa Maria Savoia 10016. All Well."

The Cabo Torres was at latitude 41.25 north and longitude 32.28 west when the sailing vessel towing the Italian's plane was sighted at 12:50 GMT, or 8:05 Eastern Daylight time.

The location of the sailing vessel was 200 miles northwest of the main body of the Azores, but only 100 miles or so northwest of Flores, the most westerly island of the group. Flores, a mountainous spot, has two towns on it, Santa Cruz and Lagens.

Late Tuesday night the news that the Spanish steamer Cadatorres had seen the Santa Maria II, Commander Francesco de Pinedo's plane, in tow by the sailing ship Infante Vessagres near the Azores, was confirmed.

Later again radio messages from Corvos Island, the Azores, and other messages from Lisbon, Portugal, reported that the Santa Maria was being towed to Fayal Island.

The Ministry of Aviation then received and announced the report that De Pinedo and his comrades were safe and well.

Immense crowds went delirious with joy, shouting and cheering as the bulletins were announced.

Commander Francesco de Pinedo's four-continent flight was started from Gagliari, Sardinia, February 13. On February 22, he flew from the Cape Verde Islands to Fernando do Noronha, off the coast of Brazil.

The Italian continued his flight thru South America and arrived in New Orleans on March 29. Flying to the Pacific coast, his plane was burned when riding at anchor at Roosevelt dam, Arizona, April 5. A new plane was sent to him from Italy, and he flew in it from New York to Florida, thence to Chicago, Montreal, Quebec, Shippegan, New Brunswick, Trepassey, Newfoundland—hopping off for the Azores early Tuesday morning.

Dynamiting the Levee Below New Orleans

This photograph, made at the instant of the explosion, shows the actual dynamiting of the Mississippi levee in St. Bernard parish when that and adjoining parishes were sacrificed to the flood waters of the Mississippi river to save the city of New Orleans. Afterward it was necessary to blast other openings in the dike and the operation was successful so far as New Orleans was concerned, but, of course, the farm and trapping lands between there and Lake Borgne were inundated and the loss there was considerable. All the inhabitants had been evacuated.

RULING ON INSURANCE IS ISSUED BY TURNER.

County commissioners have no authority to purchase and pay for burglar or hold-up insurance for the county treasurer or for any other county officer, nor have they authority to pay for insurance against forgery. Attorney General Turner ruled Tuesday.

The opinion was given at request of the state bureau of inspection of public offices.

In answer to another question from Vernon M. Riegel, state director of education, Turner ruled that there is no constitutional or statutory inhibition preventing a member of a county board of education from serving at the same time as a member of the general assembly.

Clerks of courts are without authority to pay trustees of county law library associations any part of the county's portion of fines imposed and collected by the common pleas court for violation of the Crabbe law, he ruled on a third question submitted by E. B. Brown, Hardin county prosecutor.

SHERIFF DAVIS AND DEPUTIES CAPTURE STILL

Raid Was Made in Wayne
Township and One Man and
Two Women are in Jail.

A ten gallon still was found on the farm of John W. Haughn in Wayne township Tuesday and some fifty gallons of mash and between three and four gallons of the finished product were captured.

The still was found in the home of a tenant named Edgar Davidson, and with him were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Gilmore, of Williamsport. Sheriff Davis' department brought in Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore and Mrs. Edgar Davidson. Mr. Davidson, who is a cripple, was too ill of tuberculosis and could not be taken from his bed.

When Sheriff Davis and his deputies surrounded the house Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock the moon shiners were taken completely by surprise. They hurriedly emptied some of the newly made whisky from vessels which were hidden in a hay mow. The mash was destroyed by the officers. The women made strenuous objections to being brought in by the officers, but they are now in the county jail. They will have a hearing before Judge J. W. Adkins.

Sheriff Davis and his deputies have been trying for some time to run down this bunch, but could not locate the place where they manufactured the whisky.

The warm of the still was hidden out in the yard and was under a wooden pail. The still boiler was a ten gallon cream container and to an ordinary observer, looked like a receptacle that farmers use to send cream to a dairy.

TO BUILD BUNGALOW.

L. R. Young, the contractor and builder, has secured the contract to build a six room frame bungalow for Misses Daisy and Viola Woolaver. The house will be built on Gilford road, near the residence of J. J. Bremer.

PHONE RATES DISCUSSION TUESDAY EVE

Protest to be Filed With Utilities Commission--Doctor Clarke on Dentistry.

The meeting of the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening was devoted to two local subjects, the dentists and the Citizens Telephone company. Dr. H. R. Clarke, the dean of dentists, was the speaker for his science and confreres in the dental profession.

Dr. H. S. Chenowith with the city's first dentist back in 1859, the city directory mentions Dr. E. C. Clarke and Dr. William R. Lilly, the fathers of the speaker and Dr. E. J. Lilly and Dr. R. F. Lilly.

Altho Dr. Clarke spoke of the fact that Dr. Chenowith was the first dentist, Dr. M. B. Strong and Dr. S. Barbour ran advertising cards in the issues of this paper back in 1831 and 1832.

Dentistry, said the speaker, is practically a recent science and is not much over a hundred years old. It has made great strides in the past fifty years. Circleville now has seven dentists.

J. R. Noecker, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the increased rates, which the Citizens Telephone company will ask the Utilities commission of Ohio to grant them, made his report, which was statistical showing the organization of the company back in 1901, when the company was organized with a capital of $200,000.

Following Mr. Noecker's report, Attorney Charles Gerhardt quoted the law on procedure, as to how the telephone company could get across and charge the increased rates, provided no protest was registered before June 1. Mr. Gerhardt advised the chamber of commerce to get busy. If you don't, they will get what they are asking for. The Logan Gas company pulled a trick on the city council and this was followed by both the Ohio Utilities company and the Pickaway Water company, now known as the Public Utilities corporation.

The chamber of commerce passed a resolution instructing the secretary to file a formal protest and complaint with the Utilities commission of Ohio on behalf of that body and the subscribers or patrons generally of the telephone company against the reasonableness of said proposed change and raise of rates.

Our banks have alarms by the ton;
For merely the reason
That safety's in season

What should a girl do when, after traveling several thousand miles to visit her grandfather, she finds that he has always considered her to be a boy and that the visit of a granddaughter at that particular time would be little short of a disaster?

That is the problem that confronts Bebe Daniels in her latest Paramount comedy-drama, "Senarita," which comes to the Met theater today.

Miss Daniels solves the problem in characteristic fashion. She becomes a boy for the time being and hiding behind flourishing black mustachios and the costume of a dashing caballero she appears to the grandfather she has never seen, not as the Senorita Francesca Hernandez, but as Senor Francisco.

This is the situation upon which John McDermott has fashioned the story for what is stated by critics to be the most fascinating role that Bebe Daniels has ever played.

Supporting Miss Daniels in "Senarita" are James Hall, Paramount's new leading man who in this production makes his third appearance opposite the star; William Powell, Joan Standing, Josef Swichard, Gayne Whitman and Raoul Paoli, celebrated Italian leading man and all around European athlete, holding the continental championship for the shot put.

Clarence Badger, director of "A Kiss in a Taxi" and "The Campus Flirt" handled the megaphone on this distinctly different Bebe Daniels production.

CAPITAL CITY
MADE TO ORDER*Step Taken by Australian
Government Parallels
That of U. S.

Washington.—"By moving into a capital city made out of hand, where no town existed before, the Australian government has taken a step closely parallel to that taken by the United States in the summer of 1800, when the seat of government was moved from one of its greatest cities, Philadelphia, into a virtual wilderness," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. "Canberra, the federal city, was formally dedicated by the duke of York on May 9, and the Australian parliament began deliberations in the new capital on the same date.

"A century and a quarter has seen a great advance in the art of capital-city building," continues the bulletin; "and although the residents of Canberra will find their capital, as early Washingtonians found theirs, a city made up in large part of 'magnificent distances,' at least they will have the organized comforts of modern community life such as the infant Washington could not know. One of the first things done at Canberra was to start work on a water supply system. The first unit of this has long been completed. Next, both sanitary and storm sewers were constructed; and only a little later a powerhouse was built, and a railway was extended to an existing line. There are some good streets in Canberra in place of the rude trails and muddy paths by which the American congressmen of 125 years ago found their way through thickets and across morasses between the capitol and the White House.

"The federal territory in which the new Australian capital is situated, was set apart for the purpose in December, 1900. It is near the southeastern corner of the continent close to its center of population. The territory contains 912 square miles and so is 13 times the size of the present District of Columbia.

Plans Chosen by Contest.

"Australia's new capital is to be an inland and upland city. It lies some 70 miles from the ocean, behind the dividing range of mountains that skirts the coast. It is nearly 200 miles southwest of Sydney and about 300 miles northeast of Melbourne. The site chosen for the city was formerly a sheep 'station' or ranch, an undulating upland plain with an altitude of about 1,800 feet. Scattered about are isolated hills rising 800 feet or more, while across the plain flows a small river, the Molonglo. It is in a latitude corresponding roughly to that of Chattanooga, Tenn., or Asheville, N. C.

"A world-wide contest was launched by Australia in 1911 for the submission of plans for her made-to-order capital. The first prize was won by an American, the second by a Finn, and the third by a Frenchman. The plan which has been taking shape in the Australian hills in recent years follows the American design in general, but has been modified to include some of the good points of the other winning plans, as well as changes considered necessary by the commissioners and engineers who have been entrusted with the building of the city.

"A commanding eminence south of the river was chosen as the site for the permanent capital, and about this blocks are arranged in a great circle. Lesser circles of blocks impinge upon this Capitol circuit, or exist at a distance, connected by radial avenues. North of the river, on a similar hill, a university will be built.

"Australians have profited by the errors of other capital builders, and have provided against the topsylike propensity of cities to 'just grow,' as did Washington during a certain era of its existence. No lots or areas in the district will be sold outright. Instead 99-year leases will be given, with reappraisal of values every 10 years. The leases will pay rent amounting to 5 per cent on the appraised values. By withholding leases in certain sections of the city and granting them in others, the commission of three men in charge of Canberra can control its growth. The commission also requires that no structure be erected until the plans for it have received official approval.

Dream City to Grow Slowly.

"About $25,000,000 has been expended so far toward the development of Canberra, but it still lacks much of having the appearance of a city or even of a town such as Americans or Europeans are used to. This is because the commission resolutely set about districting the future city. It now has the appearance, therefore, of a group of villages scattered over a plain. Australia is willing to bring its dream city into existence slowly. As an example, the parliament buildings are considered to be 'temporary' structures; yet they will probably be used for several generations before being superseded by a permanent capitol on the site reserved for it.

"A definite system of physical development is being adhered to. The center of the city will be given over to public buildings, parks and lakes. Off to itself is the nucleus of the shopping district; elsewhere is a modified industrial area for laundries, cold storage and the like. At a distance the district for inexpensive homes already has its scores of small bungalows. The section for more pretentious residences lies off in another direction. So the city is being shaped."

Gets Name From Scent
Rosewood is not the wood of any kind of rose tree. It is, obtained chiefly from certain kinds of Brazilian trees. The name is due to a faint smell of roses when the wood is freshly cut.

Garnet Has Little Value
Garnets are found on the surface, in river beds and in rocks. This stone is so abundant and soft that the value is slight.

The Wisdom of Fools
By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS
(Copyright)
DELICIA MOSELEY sang mockingly a fragment of pot-house ballad, caught from her cockney nurse:
Go dress yourself, Dinah, in gorgeous array,
And take yourself a husband both gallant and gray.
"Why the carol, darling? Hath music of this sort charms to soothe the parental breast?" Norman Blake demanded icily.
Colonel Moseley craved a son-in-law—not on general principles, but as a passport to certain paradise. That is, to the winning of Madame Delano: "The one woman I ever loved—really loved, sir, more beautiful than ever—and worth a million into the bargain," he had explained to Judge Blake, Norman's father, and the legal salvation of the Moseley menage.
Madame Delano also remembered—she admitted the fact not a bit coyly. Moreover she was lonely. The million had been hardly earned by twenty-five years of roving and comfortless if costly existence as Lemuel Alden Delano's wife. He had seemed at the altar the very moral and pattern of an aristocratic corpse. But he lived on for many years. In the second year of her martyrdom, Archibald Moseley had turned fickle—marrying out of hand Delicia Vere, whom, amongst all women, Madame Delano most hated. Then Delicia had died, leaving a daughter of her name. There indeed lay the root of Madame Delano's decree. "If you want me, you must get rid of that girl!" she said to Moseley.
He, however, had had the grace to rate her soundly for such unwomanly feeling. Something came of it—six months' truce. Surely that was long enough for Delicia to pick and choose from her swarming beaux a man quite to her mind. When Delicia had countered: "How if I happen not to be to his mind?" Madame had sent word that the prospect of one day inheriting the Delano millions would mend surely and swiftly any such small flaw.
This the latest bulletin from the enemy camp inspired further balladry—Delicia broke into mournful falsetto with:
O! Pappy, O! Pappy, I've made up my mind
Unto marriage just yet I don't feel inclined,
Her very large fortune I'll gladly give o'er,
If you'll let me live single a year or two more?
"Take that back—if you know what's good for—us," Norman thundered, trying hard to frown.
"Dear me! Where, I ask, do you come in?" Delicia retorted.
"You're forgetting the painful dearth of men with my looks and talent," Norman flung back loftily. Then the unregenerate pair danced up and down the big old parlor. As Delicia dropped her final curtsy, Norman exploded: "All we lack of a perfect match is a mere half million—wonder can't we persuade madame of the fact? Also that, if she listens to reason, we'll put the comelither on the old boy—a marriage contract, you know—so there'll be two happy families instead of two waiting for a dead woman's shoes."
"But—you wouldn't take me just as I stand," Delicia broke in.
"Is that a dare? Just you try me," from Norman.
"How much money have you in hand?" Delicia demanded. Lightning exploration of pockets resulted in the startling total of eleven dollars and fifty cents. "I see?" said Delicia. "I sought for my money—I have twenty dollars cash—and five hundred in the bank."
"Are you game? Really?" Norman asked huskily. Delicia nodded.
They didn't elope, this whimsical pair—simply walked into Judge Blake's office, and got themselves tied tight and fast in record time. The judge choked up a bit over the final words—the foolhardiness of it had taken his breath. What could the future hold for two so sadly spooled? It took him all aback to have Norman ask stolidly: "D'ye want a brisk young partner, judge—sober and diligent, with a wife to support?"
Support her he did, asking no favors. Instead of a tour, the pair looked up a bungalow, bought it on faith and credit—due to the five hundred in the bank—and therein faced a happy future.
Six months Madame Delano sat tight. Delicia had removed herself from the picture—"but really, my dear, the whole thing was too shocking!" Then suddenly, her long, long loneliness, the empty heart and house in wait for her, got in their fine work. She sent for Judge Blake privily—as privily she kept him busy for a fortnight. Then Greenbrier neighborhood had even a bigger sensation—not in the Delano-Moseley wedding, but in the amazing fact that Madame had parted her million evenly to the fraction of a hair, endowing Norman in fee with his moiety, and settling the rich remainder upon a potential Margaret Delano Blake, Delicia's eldest daughter.
So was the wisdom of fools abundantly justified—for all the four most nearly concerned lived long and happily ever after.

Epidemic's Big Toll

An estimate of the deaths caused by the influenza epidemic, 1918 and 1919, was made by Laumonier in the Gazette des Hospitaliers, September 30 and October 2, 1919. He says that for the total of 11 months, allowing for analogous mortalities in Central Asia and the Far East, the world mortality could easily have exceeded 25,000,000.

Seeking and Finding

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright)

WHEN Tom Higgins boarded the suburban train at Forest Hills and took the only seat that was vacant in the coach he immediately wondered if all the fellows on the train were out of their minds or if their senses were paralyzed to a degree of imbecility.

The rest of the seat which Tom had secured was occupied by the most lovely thing from the feminine world that he had ever looked upon. She was fair and violet eyed and had a smile that would lure a hermit from his cave.

The trip into the Pennsylvania station was one of joy and great despair for, while Tom was thrilled at the very proximity of the fair one, he could not but realize that a scant half hour would see her vanish into the throngs of mere human beings in New York and she would be lost to him perhaps forever.

He glanced at the dainty white hands beside him and once in awhile gazed long and earnestly out of the window, thus gaining for himself a slanting view of exquisite profile. Also he noted that her bag had the initials C. W. on it.

The only clue he managed to obtain was the fact that the book she was reading belonged to the Sea Cliff library.

Could that mere fact be in any way a stepping stone to establishing first her identity, then securing an introduction? It might. One never knows.

When she had disappeared from his life at the station Tom felt a great, great wave of loneliness sweep over him. Was ever a sensible man so completely lacking in sense! Out of the scores of fine girls he knew he couldn't see the charm of anyone in particular. But a perfect stranger, whom he happens to sit beside in a train sends his heart entirely into that realm called love.

Tom decided to seek rooms in Sea Cliff. He might as well spend his board money there as at Forest Hills. He would undoubtedly find mutual acquaintances somewhere and would attend all the social affairs he could and go to every dance at every hotel.

"Also," said Tom to himself, "I shall join the Sea Cliff library and devour every book they have and also find out who they have on their lists of readers whose initials are C. W."

And all of these things Tom did, out with no results whatever. He saw her once or twice on the train, but the seat beside her was fully occupied on these rare occasions and Tom found himself green with jealousy and hating the great hulking man who sat chatting with her.

But as for meeting her—well, that seemed like the last thing that Tom was able to effect. And weeks flew past. Weeks void of hope for Tom.

And down in the lampshade department of the big firm of decorators Connie Wendell worked diligently on a perfect dream of a lampshade. She was fast becoming one of the most artistic of the many designers employed by the huge concern and was rather hoping that before long she could strike out for herself.

In fact, Connie decided to take the bull by the horns and put in her letter of resignation right away. The time was ripe for making her start.

Next morning when the forewoman of the lampshade department learned of Connie's intended resignation consternation reigned within her. She sought immediate conference with Drycourt himself, head of the great firm.

Once within that sacred office she burst into indignant protest.

"If we let Miss Wendell leave us she will be snatched up at once by any of ten big decorators. She's a treasure. Those dream poems of shades that have been going out to the mansions at Southampton—they were one and all designed by her. Do speak with her and try to hold her, Mr. Higgins."

"Send this paragon along then, Mrs. Ward," grinned the famous Drycourt, "we mustn't jeopardize our business."

"You're doing a wise thing," said Mrs. Ward and went immediately to interview the "treasure."

Connie looked up and smiled—a truly wonderful smile.

"It's nice to know I'm giving satisfaction," she said and went off to the office.

The great Drycourt, in other words Tom Higgins, looked up as Miss Wendell came into the office.

Then he sprang to his feet and rushed forward to meet the girl who had entered, as if she had brought with her the sun, moon and stars of his existence.

"Great scott, you!" was Tom's remarkable greeting.

Connie's amazement showed plainly in her face. She didn't exactly draw back, but she certainly wondered a bit.

"How long have you been employed by my concern?" demanded Tom Higgins.

"Why—about eighteen months," said Connie.

"And you have an idea you are going to leave us—is that it?"

"Well—yes, sir," said Connie.

"Don't stir me," Tom almost roared. "And you can change your mind about leaving. I have a good many things I must tell you so you had better have lunch with me today. Is that a date?" demanded Tom.

"Yes," said Connie meekly and the wonderful smile was quite personal this time.

PRIVATE CAR PROVIDED FOR PIG JOURNEY

Demonstration Train of B. & O. in Orient and Mt. Sterling June 6.

Twenty-five pigs have been granted passes and given a private car to travel southeastern Ohio for two weeks.

Three pens are available on this car. Each pen will be occupied by a family of pigs which have never seen a railroad before. One family of sleek coated pigs was raised on the farm of William Taylor, a Butler county swine grower, who has been practicing worm control measures for four years.

Another family on the car does not boast about where they were raised, because they are much older and are much less attractive in appearance. They have been handicapped by the round worms. The sand on which they are sleeping during their excursion is so much preferable to the dirt and filth to which they have been accustomed that they hope their health and appearance will rapidly improve.

The third compartment is occupied by a mother and family of just a few weeks. These pigs will show the effects of the lung stage of the round worm. In addition to the private car on which the pigs will ride there will be a demonstration car filled with other exhibits and a lecture car, according to O. K. Quivey, general agricultural agent for the Baltimore & Ohio railway, who will be in charge of the train.

In the exhibit car will be shown all stages of the common round worm from the egg thru the lung stage to the adult form which is found in the intestines. Microscopes will be used to show the larva which are too small to be visible to the eye.

Lungs from infected pigs will be exhibited to show the injury done by the larva during the two weeks they spend in lung tissue. Simple measures which control these parasites will be explained in this car. These practices, if followed, will control some diseases and most other parasites.

Bowls of feeds will be on display in order to teach farmers the best sources of protein to use in addition to corn. The Ohio Experiment Station recommends this mixture after conducting several trials. Mineral mixtures are also shown and recommended under certain conditions by the Experiment Station. Mr. Quivey has followed the results of worm control demonstrations conducted by the university in various counties in Ohio and other states. The success of these demonstrations has been responsible for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad running a special train to spread these practices among the farmers of southwestern Ohio so that their hog production may become more profitable. The train will be in Orient Monday 8:30 a. m. to 12 m., and Mt. Sterling Monday 1:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. June 6.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Albert Hill, son of Francis M., and Mary Jane Hatfield Hill, was born in Monroe township, October 17, 1865, and departed this life at his home in Darbyville, May 18, 1927, aged 61 years, seven months and one day.

He was united in marriage to Clara Ida Ambrose and to this union were born four children, three of whom preceded their father in death; Thomas Theodore, Benjamin H., and Lucy Ruth. He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and one son, Lawson, and of his immediate family he is survived by four brothers and one sister; Seth, of Five Points; Orlando of Mt. Sterling; Milton, of Derby; Simon, of Columbus and Mrs. Rhoda Daugherty, of London.

He served as trustee of Muhlenberg township for sixteen years, which is to say that his services were well rendered.

The deceased was a member of the M. W. A., of Williamsport, the brotherhood of Five Points and the Parent-Teacher association, of Darbyville. He was a driver of one of the school busses for several years and was loved by the children of our school.

He was a considerate husband and father and a good neighbor and always met his friends with a hearty welcome and a friendly smile. In February his sickness made it necessary for a severe operation from which he never recovered and the dread disease slowly sapped his life away, but he was never heard to murmur or complain.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt and sincere thanks to all who have assisted us in any way during the illness and burial of our husband and father.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Hill.
